Government observe that this bridge leads to an island which is bounded on the north by another and wider branch of the same river, that the road to Cannanore crosses the northern branch, but that there is no bridge over it although one would be as much required as over the southern branch. The Principal Collector of Malabar and the Superintending Engineer respectively directed to report their opinions upon the utility of building a bridge over the northern branch and the latter also directed to examine and report upon a site for it and to submit a plan and estimate also to examine whether a proper site for a bridge is to be found immediately above the point where the river divides into two branches and whether the road to Cannanore could conveniently be carried round that way so that one bridge would suffice.
